About World Wildlife Day 2018

The United Nations World Wildlife Day is the global celebration of the many beautiful and varied forms of wild animals and plants on our planet as well as an occasion to raise awareness of the multitude of benefits that conservation provides to both wildlife and people and the plight of many threatened or endangered species. World Wildlife Day is celebrated annually on 3 March, the day of the signature of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) in 1973. The CITES Secretariat is the facilitator designated by the UN General Assembly for the global celebration of the Day.

World Wildlife Day 2018, celebrated under the theme “Big cats: predators under threat”, puts the world’s big cats under the global spotlight for the very first time. These magnificent predators, such as cheetah, jaguar, leopard, lion, puma, snow leopard and tiger, are found in many parts of the world, from Africa to Asia and the Americas. With a star-studded cast, this World Wildlife Day promises to be one of the biggest celebrations of the Day, if not the biggest.

Big cats are among the most powerful creatures to grace this planet, but they are also the most fragile. They are facing many threats to their survival in the wild, be it loss of habitat and prey, poaching and smuggling, human-wildlife conflict or climate change.

World Wildlife Day 2018 is an opportunity for people from every country to help raise awareness of the plight of big cats and to take personal action to help ensure the survival of the world's big cats.

You have the power to spread the word! You have the power to make a change!

Wild #tiger populations, which numbered over 100,000 only a century ago, have decreased by 97%, with much of that decline happening in the past 10 years. According to the latest estimates, there are only about 3,900 tigers left in the wild on the entire planet. Of all the big cats, tigers are the most endangered. Learn more at: wildlifeday.org

Just over a century ago, there were likely more than 200,000 wild #lions living in Africa. Today, lions are extinct in 26 African countries and have vanished from over 90 percent of their historic range. Over the past two decades alone, lion populations have decreased by 43%. Today, only about 20,000 lions remain.

#Cheetah is Africa's most threatened big cat. Only about 7,100 cheetahs are left in the wild and they are now extinct in their Asian range with the exception of about 50 individuals in Iran. Approximately 77% of the cheetah's habitat falls outside of protected areas, making them extremely vulnerable to human threats. More on wildlifeday.org
